From the Driver's Seat

By Michael Soriano

As I was putting the finishing touches on my article, the November issue of CAR and DRIVER arrived in my mailbox, which included a Special! feature paying tribute to 50 years of the 911, the second longest running sports car of all time. The article spans an impressive 35 pages. If you don't subscribe to subscribe to CAR and DRIVER, I strongly recommend getting a copy.

The pleasant weather we have been fortunate to experience this summer continued throughout the month of September lending itself perfectly to the many area car shows our club members participated in. Saturday, September 7, was the monthly Cars and Coffee, where we were pleasantly surprised by a visit from former long-time members Larry and Sally Erd who had just arrived from their home in Florida the previous evening. The following day was Vin Devers 4th annual European Auto Show. It was great to see many members participating or stopping by to show their support for this event. Also in September, several other Zone 4 regions held DEs at Grattan, Gingerman, and Mid-Ohio. Finally, we were invited to participate in the Toledo Club's first annual Concours d'Elegance as well as the 3rd annual Ottawa Hills Fall Festival Car Show.

The October 5 event at Porsche of Ann Arbor had to be rescheduled due to the U of M's Homecoming Parade. Our next Business Meeting is Thursday, October 10 at 7 p.m. in the Vin Devers Conference Room. On October 12, RSR has invited us to participate in their Fall Color Tour and Safari; also on October 12, Central Classic Cars is holding an Open House, Car Show, and Silent Auction benefitting the Rita T. Sheely Memorial Fund for Ovarian Cancer Research. The penultimate Cars and Coffee of the year is Sunday October 13 from 9 a.m. to Noon-ish at the Tim Hortons on Central Avenue just west of McCord in Sylvania. And, our social event for the month, Party at the Schoen's is on Saturday, October 19 at 4 p.m.

The terms for several of our officers and chairpersons are ending, and we are looking for members to fill these soon-to-be vacant positions. If you are interested in helping to improve our club, please consider volunteering for one of the available positions, and contact Jeff Vollmar: jtvollmar@att.net or me: MichaelSoriano@juno.com.

By now you should have received your invitation to our Holiday Party, which is being held on Saturday, November 16 in the Private Dining Room of the Epic Buffet at the Hollywood Casino. These events are always a great deal of fun, so please plan to attend. The December event is going to be held on Sunday, December 15 at Steve's Dakota Grill in Findlay.

Rush With Someone to See “Rush”

By Dick Badler

Ok, I have a mission for you: Take a friend to see “Rush.” A friend who isn’t into performance cars. Who doesn’t follow racing.

It’ll be, as we say, a “mitzvah,” a good deed, a plus mark in the karma ledger. It’s your obligation as a lover of Porsches and sports cars and racing in general.

Here’s what happened with me.

I had decided, weeks before opening weekend, to see the film with my friend Julie, Peter Revson’s sister. I thought, well, what could be more appropriate than that.

But she canceled on me, the night before opening day.

Now, having seen the film, I can say that it was probably a good idea for her to pass. She’s someone who thinks about her brother, who died testing at Kyalami 39 years ago, every day.

So I went with another friend, someone who is definitely not into cars, much less Formula 1. She drives an old Toyota Matrix... not that there’s anything wrong with that.

When the lights came up, her first question to me was, did that really happen?

An allusion to Hollywood’s history of taking, uh, liberties with the facts?

No matter. My answer was that, yes, from a framework standpoint, the story stands. For example, Lauda’s crash was spot-on. I told my friend that, in preparation for the screening, I had watched on YouTube a video of the actual crash, in grainy black and white, shot through the trees. And the big-screen color version was identical. In fact, it looked like they used the actual YouTube video in the film, as a TV replay.

As for the behind-the-scenes incidents, the press conference, the one in the janitor’s closet, the one with the Italians, the conversation in the hangar, and so forth, who knows. Although I understand from an article in Autoweek that the screenwriter, who is British, is married to an Austrian. The couple lives in Vienna, and his wife knows Lauda. She put them in contact and, out of that, Niki provided extensive first-hand commentary and background.

As the closing credits ran across the screen, my friend sat back in her seat, glassy-eyed. She said her hands and wrists were throbbing, from gripping the chair rails.

We went to dinner, and the questions continued.

Do these cars race at Long Beach? I laughed, because she’s from LA...

I said they did during the first few years of the Long Beach race. But the series moved on, long ago. Now Indycars run there, the same cars that run at the Indy 500. They look like Formula 1 cars, at least to the untrained eye. But they’re not. They’re all actually built by the same manufacturers, and bought by each team.

Then I went on to explain what a “spec” series is, and how Formula 1 is emphatically not a spec series... how each team in Formula 1 builds its own cars, and some build their own engines too, and how these cars are, far and away, the most expensive and most technologically advanced in the world, and how, with downforce, they're pressed to the track so hard they could run on the ceiling, and how, yes, they're faster than anything else, by far, and how, in order to develop the skills to master them, every driver today starts as a pre-teen in go-karts.

Was Lauda the best?

Of his era, maybe. Maybe Villeneuve-Who really knows. But he certainly was the hardest worker of all the drivers of his era. I'd say he had superhuman grit, an off-the-chart capacity to do what it took... if not native talent... and the film caught that remarkably well.

But I wouldn't quite put him with the pantheon, with Stewart, Clark, Senna, Fangio, Schumacher, even Vettel

I explained how, when Senna died in 1994, all Brazil shut down for three days of mourning. The whole country. And I mentioned the movie "Senna," which is a very different film from "Rush" -- it's a documentary that tries to get into the head of the legend, and largely succeeds. I said she should see it.

I had no idea, she said.

Which is just the point. Because, folks, this is probably the first film ostensibly about racing that fully pulls you in... not just us gearheads -- we'd see it for the racing footage alone, which is why we still watch "Le Mans" -- but the naysayers, the civilians, those who would otherwise complain to you about watching cars go round and round, lap after lap... who would ask you, why? What's the big deal? What's the intrigue? They never actually go anywhere!

This film comes closer than anything ever put on the big screen to provide an answer. It makes "Grand Prix" look like a cartoon with pioneering cinematographic techniques.

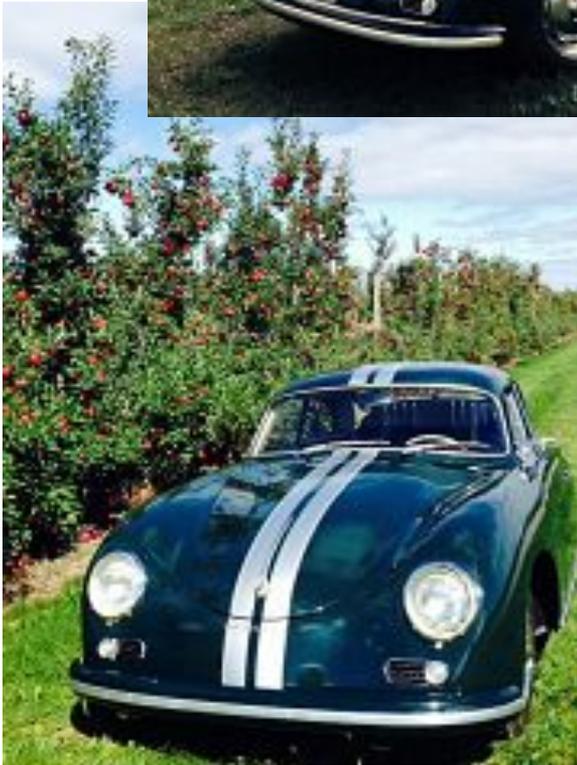

Hemingway allegedly said there are just three true sports - bullfighting, mountain climbing and motor racing. The rest are merely games.

"Rush" proves the point, at least for one of the three. Which is why you should go, and why you should take someone who is not into cars and racing. You have an obligation.

Technical Talk

By John Jennens, owner of The Car Port LLC

Since we are now officially into the fall season, it's time to start thinking about winter storage for our prized possessions. A few hearty souls do drive their Porsches all year round, but with the exception of the Cayenne and maybe a few C4s, most of us tuck our toys away for a few months. In this month's column we'll look at winter storage prep.

1.) BATTERY. This is a good place to start. (Insert groan here.) Like all newer cars, modern Porsches will drain their batteries just sitting there parked. A good battery maintainer can do more than keep a charge in your battery, it will preserve the "learned" settings in your car's computers. So the days of wrestling the battery out of the car and sitting it on the workbench with a maintainer are over. It's important to note that we're talking about a battery maintainer, not a battery trickle charger. There are several types of maintainers – some plug into the cigarette lighter and then into a wall (AC) outlet, others connect directly to the terminals on the battery and then a wall outlet.

2.) TIRES. Over inflate your tires by 10 to 15 psi before letting them sit all winter... don't exceed the pressure on the sidewall, though. The idea is to help keep them as round as possible and reduce "flat spots." A Post-it note on the dash with a reminder "Tires @ 45psi !" for example, should keep you from driving off without correcting the pressures. If you should forget, you didn't hear about over-inflating them from me. If you plan on driving the car on nice days, just skip this step.

3.) GAS. To reduce the buildup of condensation in your gas tank, it's smart to fill up shortly before storing your car. A good quality gas stabilizer is also a good idea. Follow the directions on the label - this isn't one of those cases of a little is good and a lot is better.

4.) FLUIDS. Check all fluid levels and have the oil and oil filter changed. The old oil holds contaminants that have nothing better to do all winter than to eat away at your engine's internal parts.

5.) RODENT - PROOF. Speaking of eating away, rodents, especially mice, are known social climbers. To them, living in a high class Porsche, is like calling the Taj Mahal home. A family of the despicable critters can destroy a wiring harness in a very short time. Why they find colored wires so delectable is a mystery. Maybe the older ones are looking for more fiber in their diets.

6.) SUSPEND INSURANCE. Again, optional if you're planning to drive your car occasionally. Be sure that if you do go out for a spin that you check your tire pressures (in case someone suggested over-inflating them), and drive the car long enough to get everything up to temperature. Just starting the car every few days or weeks and letting it idle will actually do more harm than good.

Follow these simple suggestions and your car should be raring to go in the Spring.

Next up is the party hosted by Diane and Jim Schoen on the 19th of October. That will be followed by the holiday party at Hollywood Casino on November 16. The holiday party invitations have already been mailed out. If you have not received yours, Check page 11 for details or give Lisa Soriano a call. Seating is limited.

I want to thank the Bellmans and the Gobbas for submitting some great pictures. Always nice to see the members enjoying their cars.

Flash your headlights at a fellow Porsche owner on the road!! Keep the kindred spirit alive!!
